Moderator: PROF. Gilles Dufrénot (Aix-Marseille School of Economics, France)

Keynote Speaker 1: PROF. Cheng HSIAO (University of South California, the USA)

Cheng Hsiao is Professor of economics at the University of Southern California. He has made significant contributions to theoretical and applied econometrics with focus on panel data, utility demand analysis, measurement of policy impacts, China's financial reform and infrastructural investment, etc. He has published more than 150 academic papers in prestigious international journals. His works have received more than 40,000 Google citations. Essays in honor of Cheng Hsiao have also been published in the Journal of Econometrics, Econometrics Review and Advances in Econometrics special issues and volumes. He is also the author of four editions of the classic Analysis of Panel Data book. He is an academican of Academia Sinica, a Fellow of the Econometric Society, Journal of Econometrics, International Association for Applied Econometrics, and Modelling and Simulation Society of Australia and New Zealand.

Lecture: “Statistical Inference for the Low Dimensional Parameters in the Presence of High-Dimensional Data: An Orthogonal Projection Approach”

Abstract

We consider the estimation and statistical inference for low dimensional parameters for a regression model with covariates whose dimension increases with sample size. We suggest a computationally simple one stage orthogonal projection approach to estimate the low dimensional parameters under strict or approximate sparsity conditions. The orthogonal projection approach is simple to implement. It does not need to first implement machine learning/big data approach to select relevant covariates, hence avoids possible selection mistakes and complicated regularization bias issue commonly associated with the two stage estimation method. Inference for the low dimensional parameters is straightforward to derive whether the high dimensional function is linear or nonlinear. Monte Carlo simulations and empirical applications are also conducted to investigate the finite sample performance of the proposed estimator vs the double/debiased estimator of Belloni et al. (2014) and Chernozhukov et al. (2018).

10:00 AM – 11:00 AM      Plenary Session 2      Room Yvonne Foinant

Keynote Speaker 2: PROF. John Y. CAMPBELL (Harvard University, the USA)

Moderator: PROF. Fredj Jawadi (University of Lille, France)

Keynote Speaker 2: PROF. John Y. CAMPBELL (Harvard University, the USA)

John Y. Campbell is the Morton L. and Carole S. Olshan Professor of Economics at Harvard University, where he has taught since 1994.

Campbell has published over 100 articles on various aspects of finance and macroeconomics, including fixed-income securities, equity valuation, portfolio choice, and household finance. His books include Financial Decisions and Markets: A Course in Asset Pricing (Princeton University Press 2018), The Squam Lake Report: Fixing the Financial System (with the Squam Lake Group of financial economists, PUP 2010), Strategic Asset Allocation: Portfolio Choice for Long-Term Investors (with Luis Viceira, Oxford University Press 2002), and The Econometrics of Financial Markets (with Andrew Lo and Craig MacKinlay, PUP 1997).

Campbell delivered the Ely Lecture to the American Economic Association in 2016 and served as President of the American Finance Association in 2005. He is a Research Associate and former Director of the Program in Asset Pricing at the National Bureau of Economic Research, a Fellow of the Econometric Society and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, a Corresponding Fellow of the British Academy and Honorary Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and holds honorary doctorates from BI Norwegian Business School, the University of Maastricht, the University of Paris Dauphine, and Copenhagen Business School. Campbell is also a founding partner of Arrowstreet Capital, LP, a Boston-based quantitative asset management firm.

Lecture: “What Drives Booms and Busts in Value?”

Abstract

Value investing delivers volatile returns, with large drawdowns both in periods of strong stock market performance such as the technology boom of the late 1990s, and in stock market downturns such as the global financial crisis of 2008 and the Covid-19 pandemic of 2020. This paper interprets the returns to the standard value strategy through the lens of an intertemporal CAPM. In this model, the shocks that move value returns include shocks to the expected cash flows of the aggregate stock market, shocks to the discount rates applied to those cash flows, and shocks to the variance of aggregate market returns. We document that these three shocks explain a large fraction (about 50%) of the quarterly returns to value investing over the last 60 years. In addition, the paper distinguishes the intra-industry and inter-industry components of the value strategy, and finds that average returns, ICAPM risk exposures, and the explanatory power of ICAPM shocks for portfolio returns are higher for the intra-industry component. Finally, we develop a methodology to perform the ICAPM decomposition at the daily frequency, which helps us explain the daily fluctuations in value returns during the Covid-19 pandemic period. We find that the ICAPM helps to explain the return to intra-industry value during this period, whereas inter-industry value appears to be driven in large part by industry-specific earning shocks attributable to the pandemic.

Nour Meddahi is Professor of Economics at the Toulouse School of Economics (TSE). He is specialized in financial econometrics, econometrics, time series, and risk management. His work focuses on the measurement, modeling, forecasting and valuation of volatility, as well as on high-frequency data statistics and risk management. He has published his work in Econometrica, Review of Financial Studies, Journal of the American Statistical Association, Journal of Econometrics, Econometric Theory, and the Journal of Applied Econometrics. He is an elected Fellow of the Econometric Society, the International Association for Applied Econometrics, and the Society for Financial Econometrics. He holds an engineering degree from ENSAE (Economics and Statistics), a Master degree from PSE (Economics), and a Ph.D. from TSE. Prior to joining TSE, he was Assistant and Associate Professor of Economics at the University of Montreal and Reader in Finance at Imperial College Business School.

Lecture: “Forecast Comparison Tests Under Fat Tails”

Abstract

Forecast comparison tests are widely implemented to compare the performances of two or more competing forecasts. The validity of the tests often relies on the central limit theorem or by the stationary bootstrap under regularity conditions, including the one where the second moment of loss differences is bounded. However, when the loss difference is fat tailed and the required moment condition is violated, the validity of the tests relying on the Gaussian asymptotics is questionable. We show that the conventional testing procedure may yield severe size distortions under the presence of fat tails. The distortion is large especially when the tail of the marginal distribution of the loss difference is heavy and asymmetric. As an alternative approach, we propose to use a subsampling method that is robust to fat tails. In the empirical study, we consider several variance forecasts and analyze their tail behaviors and predictive abilities. Examining several tail index estimators, we find that the second moment of the loss difference is likely to be unbounded especially when the popular squared error loss is used. Moreover, our robust forecast comparison test provides different conclusions in some cases compared to the existing variance forecast literature.

He received his DPolSc (Econometrics) from the University of Helsinki. He has been Professor of Statistics, University of Helsinki, 1976-1980, Research Fellow, Research Institute of the Finnish Economy, 1980-1989, Research Fellow, Norges Bank, 1993-1994, and Professor of Econometrics, Stockholm School of Economics, 1994-2006. He was Distinguished Senior Fellow at the Hanken School of Economics, Helsinki, 2001-2013, and Visiting Professor at the Queensland University of Technology, Brisbane, 2013-2016. Teräsvirta is elected member of the International Statistical Institute (since 1978), Societas Scientiarum Fennica, Helsinki (since 1978), and the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences, Stockholm (since 2001). He is Journal of Applied Econometrics Distinguished Author, Fellow of Journal of Econometrics, Honorary Member of the Finnish Statistical Society, Fellow of the Society for Financial Econometrics, and Fellow of the International Institute of Forecasters. Teräsvirta was member of the Prize Committee for the Sveriges Riksbank Prize in Economic Sciences in memory of Alfred Nobel, 2002-2010.

He has co-authored two books on nonlinear econometrics (with Clive W.J. Granger and Dag Tjøstheim) and published a number of book chapters and articles in international journals. His research and teaching interests include nonlinear time series econometrics and volatility modelling.

Lecture: “Long Monthly European Temperature Series and the North Atlantic Oscillation”

Abstract

In this presentation, the relationship between the surface air temperatures in 28 European cities and towns and the North Atlantic Oscillation (NAO) is modelled using the Vector Seasonal Shifting Mean and Covariance Autoregressive model, extended to contain exogenous variables. Central statistical and time series features of the model are discussed before moving on to discussing data and showing empirical results. The model also incorporates season-specific spatial correlations that are functions of latitudinal, longitudinal, and elevation differences of the various locations. The empirical results, based on long monthly time series, agree with previous ones in the literature in that the NAO is found to have its strongest effect on temperatures during winter months. The transition from the boreal winter to the summer is not monotonic, however. The strength of the error correlations of the model between locations is inversely related to the distance between the locations, with a slower decay in the east-west than north-south direction. Altitude differences also matter but only during the boreal winter half of the year.

4:45 PM – 5:45 PM: Distinguished Speaker 2: PROF. William Barnett (University of Kansas, the USA)

William A. Barnett is the Oswald Distinguished Professor of Macroeconomics at the University of Kansas, Director at the Center for Financial Stability in New York City, and Director of the Institute for Nonlinear Dynamical Inference. His MIT Press book, Getting It Wrong, won the American Publisher’s Award for Professional and Scholarly Excellence (the PROSE Award), and his book with Nobel Laureate, Paul Samuelson, Inside the Economist’s Mind, has been translated into seven languages. He is the originator of the Divisia Monetary Aggregates and “the Barnett critique.” He has published widely on tests for nonlinear dynamics, chaos, and bifurcation and on financial aggregation and index number theory. He also is a major contributor to research on modeling consumer and producer behavior. He is Founder and First President of the Society for Economic Measurement, Founder and Editor of the Cambridge University Press journal, Macroeconomic Dynamics, and of the Emerald Press monograph series, International Symposia in Economic Theory and Econometrics.

He has received over 45 different awards and honors, is a Fellow of the American Statistical Association, Charter Fellow of the Journal of Econometrics, Charter Fellow of the Society for Economic Measurement, Fellow of the World Innovation Foundation, Fellow of the TANDO international policy institute, Fellow of the Johns Hopkins Institute for Applied Economics, and Honorary Professor at Henan University in China. He has authored over 200 articles published in professional journals and 41 books as author or editor. Special issues of the Journal of Econometrics, Econometric Reviews, and the Journal of Financial Stability have been published in his honor.

His degrees in engineering, finance, statistics, and economics are from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (BS), University of California at Berkeley (MBA), and Carnegie Mellon University (MS, PhD). He was on the staff of the Federal Reserve Board in Washington, DC and was a full professor at the University of Texas at Austin and Washington University in St. Louis as well as having been a research associate at the University of Chicago and visiting professor at Johns Hopkins University and Duke University.

Before becoming an economist, he was one of the systems development engineers who developed the rocket engines for Apollo at Rocketdyne in Los Angeles. He is on the Research.com list of the “Top Economics and Finance Scientists in the World.”

Lecture: “Shilnikov Chaos”

Abstract

In the physical sciences, mathematical chaos has proven to be very valuable. Much of that value is acquired from the geometry of the fractal (“strange”) attractor set into which the long run dynamics of the system are drawn. It has been shown by Takens that all of the information about the unknown system producing the solution paths is contained within the fractal geometry of the attractor set.

While tests for chaos have often detected chaos in economic data, the sample size limitation has hindered the ability to generate the geometry of the fractal attractor set. Without the ability to produce large numbers of replications from controlled experiments, applications of chaos have been constrained by the sample size problem. That problem has been especially troublesome in determining the usefulness of findings of completely generally chaos in economics without the ability to produce the fractal attractor set with small samples.

But in the physical sciences, a special case of chaos, Shilnikov chaos, has been found to fit a surprisingly large percentage of cases of observed chaos in nature. When conditioned upon a model, the Shilnikov criterion can not only be used to detect chaos but to produce the geometry of the fractal attractor set with small samples.

We have applied the Shilnikov criterion to new Keynesian models fitted to US and UK data. We find Shilnikov chaos, when the model exhibits sticky prices and the central bank policy follows an active Taylor feedback rule. Under those conditions, we find that the fractal attractor set’s clustering of points implies slow downward drift of interest rates towards the lower bound, consistent with that drift in recent decades in the US and the UK.

This can be interpreted as a liquidity trap phenomenon, produced by the existence of a chaotic attractor, and not by the influence of an unintended steady state or the Central Bank’s intentional choice of a steady state nominal interest rate at its lower bound. In addition, our finding of Shilnikov chaos can provide an alternative explanation for the controversial “loanable funds” over-saving theory, which seeks to explain why interest rates and, to a lesser extent inflation rates, had declined to low levels, such that the real rate of interest was below the marginal product of capital. Paradoxically, an active interest rate feedback policy can cause nominal interest rates, inflation rates, and real interest rates unintentionally to drift downwards within a Shilnikov attractor set.

Policy options to eliminate or control the chaotic dynamics are developed and found to imply that the Taylor rule is a myopic short run stabilization rule lacking a long run transversality condition. Control of the downward drift requires adoption of a second long run policy instrument to impose a terminal condition. Central Bank experimentation with alternative policies can be interpreted as search for such second instruments needed for use in parallel with the short run Taylor rule.
